THIEVES RAID TWO TOWNS GET AWAY WITH 90 CENTS

Visit Several Wealthy Homes In Bellefonte And Centre Hall.

WERE HUNTING MONEY

However, Carried off Pair of Trousers Belonging to Solomon Boal, at Centre Hall, and Few of Joe Montgomery's Choice Cigars.

Thieves last week made a raid on several towns in Centre County, visiting Centre Hall on Thursday night and Bellefonte on Friday night. At Centre Hall all they secured was 75 cents in change and a pair of trousers belonging to Solomon Boal. In Bellefonte they got but 15 cents and several cigars. The money was taken from the home of William S. Chambers. The cigars were stolen from the home of Joseph L. Montgomery. After going through the Montgomery residence the thieves visited the Chambers home and then attempted to gain an entrance to the home of Colonel W. Fred Reynolds. They were frightened from the latter place before they could pry open a window at which they were working. A falling awning is supposed to have frightened off the men.

Two colored men are suspected of being the thieves. On Saturday the two men were seen traveling in the direction of Howard. They are believed to be strangers to this community.

Apparently the thieves were after money, only, since they ignored silver articles and trinkets in several houses entered. The coolness with which they worked in effecting an entrance to the Montgomery residence was worthy of professionals. The thieves first secured a ladder at the new High School building, directly across the street, and placed it beneath the bathroom window, on the side of the house next to the home of Clement Dale. Before doing so, however, they turned off an electric light on the rear porch, which ordinarily burns all night. The first attempt to reach the bathroom window failed, the ladder being several feet too short. The thieves found a bench on the rear porch and by placing the ladder on this succeeded in getting into the bathroom.

Once inside the bathroom the thieves lost no time in going through the entire house, with the exception of those rooms occupied by Mrs. Montgomery and the children. Although a light sleeper, Mrs. Montgomery did not hear the thieves, who at one time were at work in her husband's room, adjoining. Mr. Montgomery was out of town and the thieves went through his room at their leisure, ransacking bureau drawers, etc., in their search for money. Silver mounted brushes were not disturbed, the only article taken being a cigar case given to Mr. Montgomery about fifteen years ago by Thomas K. Morris on his return from Berlin. The cigar case resembled a a wallet and it is supposed that the thieves took this thinking it contained money. They discovered their mistake as soon as they had left the house, however, the cigar case later being found in the yard. As a compliment to Mr. Montgomery on his brand of cigars the thieves condescended to take with them eight or nine which were in the case.

The Chambers residence was next visited, the thieves gaining an entrance through the first floor window. They found about 15 cents in change belonging to the Chambers children, and this was carried off. Indicating that they were hungry was the theft of a bottle of milk. This was taken from the house and the bottle thrown into a rear alley. A plate of cold beans was also taken.

Colonel Reynolds' residence was next visited. The thieves selected a window on the western side of the house and settled down to effect an entrance. The window awning was tied up, the string being held in place by a hook in the centre of the sill below. It was the breaking of this string that sent the thieves on a run from the place. They were at work with a "jimmie," attempting to force open the window and the awning string interfered with their operations. In order to force the "jimmie" under the window, directly under the centre latch, the thieves cut or untied the awning string. The awning, suddenly released, dropped into position, making considerable noise and frightening the thieves. Tracks found in the flower bed, beneath the window, showed that the thieves were in their bare feet at the time.

At Centre Hall the thieves employed the same methods as marked their operations in Bellefonte. They went to

BAILEYVILLE PICNIC

Company E. Reunion Will be One of Many Interesting Features.

The plans for the annual picnic at Baileyville are progressing nicely and all indications are that the outing this year will be the most successful ever held in that section. As usual, persons for many miles around are planning to attend.

One of the many interesting features of the day will be the 49th anniversary reunion of the survivors of Company E, 45th Penna. Vols. The reunion will mark the anniversary of the leaving that section for the seat of war. The Company E Monumental Association will hold a lunch on the day of the picnic as the first step toward raising funds for the proposed monument. Other ways will also be devised to aid in raising the money necessary to erect a monument which will contain brass tablets, giving the names of the 204 men who were from that section and who enlisted for service for the Union. It is hoped to have the monument completed in time for dedication at the fiftieth anniversary next year. To make this possible the home pride of the citizens of that valley must prompt them to liberally contribute toward the building fund. It is estimated that the monument, including the bronze tablets, will cost upward of $1000.

Company E had a proud record in the war. The members traveled over 13,000 miles of territory and engaged in many important battles. The dead are buried in twelve or more States.

The speakers selected for this year's reunion include J. D. Hicks, of Tyrone; Rev. Ralph M. Illingsworth, of Marietta; Judge Beaver, W. C. Heinle and J. C. Meyer, of Bellefonte.

DALE FAMILY REUNION

Descendents of Christian Dale Meet at Oak Hall, on Saturday.

On Saturday, August the sixth, the Dale family held its reunion at Oak Hall. This was the place that Christian Dale came to in 1790, to make his future home. He brought with him his entire family, consisting of five sons and three daughters. He bought a large tract of land, cleared a number of farms and became quite prosperous for a man of those days. On last Saturday the family met to celebrate the one hundred and tenth anniversary of his first locating at Oak Hall. The day was a delightful one and every one present seemed bent on having a pleasant time.

The forenoon was spent in greeting and in renewing old associations. At an early hour dinner was served and all partook of a bountiful repast. The meeting was called to order in the Grange Hall by A. W. Dale, president of the association. John S. Dale, secretary, read the minutes of last year's meeting. Following the reading of the minutes a very interesting literary program was rendered. Clement Dale, Esq., the historian of the association, gave an account of the Dale family from the time of the arrival of Christian Dale in America in 1749. Arthur C. Dale read a paper entitled, "What the Family Reunion does for us." Recitations were rendered by Mildred Dale, Rosetta Dale, Edwin Dale and Sarah C. Dale.

An opportunity was then given for any present to make impromptu speeches and quite a number of visitors and neighbors expressed their gratification in being permitted to attend and enjoy the festivities of the occasion. It is to be hoped that these reunions shall continue from year to year and grow in interest as it is certainly a very pleasant and delightful way of spending a day in social enjoyment.

Reunion Postponed.

The proposed reunion and picnic of Centre County residents of Blair County, which was to have been held in the near future, has been postponed and instead a banquet will be held. This will be some time during the winter, the time and place to be determined. The plan to hold a picnic was abandoned owing to the fact that the park, near Altoona, desired for the purpose, was engaged for the only days regarded as suitable for the largest number of those likely to attend. The plan of postponing the event and having instead a banquet in the winter was then suggested and it seemed to meet with so much approval that it was immediately adopted.

Special Offer.

In view of the immense popularity of "The Goose Girl", the serial story running in "The Republican", the management wishes to announce that persons subscribing for the paper will be furnished with back copies, free, in order that they may have all the chapters complete. The number of back copies on hand is limited, so that anybody desiring to have the complete story should not delay becoming enrolled as a subscriber, at $1 a year, in advance.

SAYS SCHOOL CODE WILL BENEFIT OUR CHILDREN

Supt. of Public Instruction Schaeffer Writes "The Republican."

MEANS LONGER TERMS

To Develop Better Teachers and Closer Supervision of Children in Rural Districts—Hopes it Will Pass Unchanged in Next Legislature.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Nathan C. Schaeffer, in a letter to the editor of "The Republican", makes the confident prediction that the proposed School Code, which will be introduced in the next Legislature, will be of great benefit to every child in Centre County. Superintendent Schaeffer's views on the subject are decidedly interesting. He aided in drafting the proposed School Code and better perhaps than any other man in Pennsylvania knows what it aims to accomplish and how it expects to accomplish it.

It is entirely probable that Superintendent Schaeffer will visit Centre County in the near future. He has been invited to attend the dedication of the new High School building, at Bellefonte, on Friday, August 26.

It will be recalled that the School Code, passed by the last Legislature, was vetoed by Governor Stuart. The measure, while intended to revise and simplify the school laws of Pennsylvania was so loaded down with amendments as to destroy many of its good features and still further accentuate its defects. The new School Code was drafted to embody the best features of that passed by the last Legislature and also to contain the best thought of noted educators who had before them the experience of the authors of the measure that was vetoed.

It was to learn how the proposed School Code will affect the public schools of Centre County that "The Republican" communicated with Superintendent Schaeffer, asking that he give his views on the subject. In our letter we explained that we desired this information for the parents of school children in the county. To our letter Superintendent Schaeffer replied as follows.

Harrisburg, Aug. 6, 1910,

Editor Chas. E. Dorworth,

Bellefonte, Pa.

Dear Sir: In reply to your letter, I beg to say that in my opinion the proposed School Code, if enacted into law without change, will give the children of Centre County a longer school term, better teachers and closer supervision.

The Code aims to give every child a decent seat in a decent school house. It aims to give the children in rural districts the benefits of medical inspection and of agricultural education. It aims to give the taxpayers an adequate return for every dollar taken out of his purse for school purposes.

I am anxious to have people study the Code from their own local and personal point of view. In this study of the Code the interests of the children should be made the first consideration. The civilization of a community can always be gauaged by what its people are willing to do for the children.

At the last session of the Legislature entirely too much stress was laid upon the interests of architects, publishers, tax collectors, treasurers and officeholders, as if the schools existed for these and not for the sake of the children. So many contradictory amendments were made to the Code that no one could foretell the agitation, litigation and confusion which it would have caused in hundreds of school districts, had it not been vetoed by the Governor.

No one will wish the revised Code to be enacted into law if it is again so amended as to give the school children educational advantages inferior to those which they enjoy under existing legislation.

Very respectfully,

NATHAN C. SCHAEFFER,

State Supt. of Public Instruction.

J. K. TENER WILL VISIT GRANGERS PICNIC SEPT. 15

Republican Nominee for Governor to Deliver Address.

WILL BE NOTABLE DAY

Party Standard Bearer Will be Accompanied by Colleagues on Ticket—Chairman Rhone Announces Picnic Will be Held Sept. 10-16.

Republican State Chairman Walton, in a telegram yesterday to "The Republican," announces that John K. Tener, Republican nominee for Governor, and his colleagues on the ticket, will visit Centre County in September and that Mr. Tener will speak at the grangers picnic on Thursday, September 15. This will afford many persons in the county their first opportunity to hear Mr. Tener speak. It is planned to make Thursday of that week "Republican Day" and to have a large representation of the Republicans from Centre County in attendance to welcome Mr. Tener and the several other nominees.

Chairman Leonard Rhone this week announced that the annual encampment and exhibition of the Patrons of Husbandry, of Central Pennsylvania, more popularly known as the "Grangers' Picnic," will be held this year, September 10 to 16, inclusive. This will be the thirty-seventh annual picnic and plans are being made to make it the most successful in the interesting history of the Grange.

With good weather the grangers picnic is always a success, so this this year especially the committee cooperating with Chairman Rhone—George Gingerich and G. L. Goodhart are praying for lots of sunshine during the chosen week. That the Weather Man will not turn a deaf ear to their prayers is the earnest wish of every friend of the grangers.

It is planned this year to make the exhibition of farming implements, etc., the most interesting and instructive of any of the picnics in the last ten years. Chairman Rhone is working with this object in view and he is confident that the result will be a delightful surprise to the large crowd which is expected to be in attendance.

As usual, plans are under way to accommodate the numerous families who always camp on the picnic grounds, which are located a short distance from the Pennsylvania Railroad station at Centre Hall. Prominent speakers will be on hand to deliver lectures on subjects of interest to farmers. The program of entertainments for the several evenings during picnic week will be of a much higher character than usually may be found at such places.

CENTRE COUNTY POMONA GRANGE.

Centre County Pomona Grange will meet in the hall of Bald Eagle Grange, at Milesburg, on Thursday, August 18, at 10 o'clock a. m., and 1 o'clock p. m. All Fourth-degree members are cordially invited. An interesting program will be rendered. As there is business of importance to transact at this meeting, we would like to have a good turnout from all over the county.

Yours fraternally,

WILLARD DALE, Master.

D. M. CAMPBELL, Secretary.

Philipsburg Man Shot.

Orin Magwire, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Magwire, of Philipsburg, was shot and killed near New Castle, on Friday night, last. Magwire was working as a street car conductor on the line running between New Castle and Sharon. The shooting was done by an Italian, who became incensed because Magwire refused to return ten cents, which had been paid as fare for two passengers. Magwire explained that the fares had been registered and that the matter would be adjusted by the company at the end of his run. Trouble followed and he attempted to eject the foreigners from the car. One of the latter drew a gun and killed Magwire. Two foreigners were arrested and held on the charge of murder. Magwire's body was brought to Philipsburg on Tuesday for interment.

Mayor Gaynor Still Improving.

According to bulletins early today, Mayor Gaynor, of New York, who was shot on Tuesday by a discharged city employe, still continues to improve and the attending physicians are confident of his complete recovery. Gallagher, the man who did the shooting, is in prison. Street Commissioner Edwards, who overpowered Gallagher, at the time of the shooting, has received letters threatening his life. They were signed "A friend of Gallagher."

IF YOU'RE A BOOSTER PROVE IT TOMORROW

Buy Your Tickets and Help Swell Crowd at the Big Ball Game.

ALL STORES TO CLOSE

Program is for Everybody to Take Afternoon Off and Boost Bellefonte by Boosting the Home Team—Game is With Clearfield.

Tomorrow is the day that everybody gets a chance to be a booster.

It marks the opportunity for every person who has been claiming to be a booster for his home town to prove it.

Figuratively speaking, Bellefonte is "from Missouri" and tomorrow she will insist on "being shown."

Its all to help the Bellefonte baseball club and unless every indication is wrong, it will be a big success. At 3.30 o'clock in the afternoon Bellefonte and Clearfield will clash on the diamond, at the Hughes Field. The only thing that could possibly happen to be out of harmony with the day would be a victory for Clearfield. The Bellefonte boys are going at express train speed and promise that they will come home with the bacon.

Clearfield is looming up as the strongest team in the Mountain League. A better team could not have been selected for this occasion. Any team that can clean up Osceola three games straight, wallop Philipsburg and then spank Bellefonte just by way of pastime is "going some." That's what Clearfield did recently. Tomorrow Bellefonte promises to be revenged and, incidentally, prove that when it comes to boosting the team can do a little itself.

Every business place, all the stores, etc., in Bellefonte will close between the hours of 3 and 5 o'clock to help swell the crowd at Hughes Field. With the Weather Man handing out a little in the way of sunshine, the crowd promises to be a record breaker.

If you thus far have failed to purchase a ticket from any one of the twenty-five pretty young ladies who are contesting for the $15 and $5 prizes in gold, don't put it off any longer. You must have a ticket to see the game and the safest plan is to buy your ticket before going to the grounds. The young ladies are hustling for all they are worth, and what's more, they are making a big success of their part of the program. When it comes down to old-fashioned "boosting" the girls can put it over the men every time.

When tomorrow comes around, just make up your mind that you are going to take the afternoon off and for one day in the year, at least, do something to boost your home town.

Don't be like the one-legged fellow down South.

Benefit at Scenic.

Tomorrow night (Friday) Manager Clayton Brown, of the Scenic, will give his special benefit entertainment, the proceeds to be devoted to the Bellefonte base ball club. J. M. Cunningham and J. Linn Harris are the committee in charge of the event. The program that is being preprared for occasion will be a delightful surprise and a most enjoyable evening is in store for all who attend. In addition to securing an evening of rare entertainment for a small admission each person attending the Scenic tomorrow night will have the satisfaction of knowing he is thereby helping the base ball team. Just by way of a peep into what is in store for the audience when the curtain goes up tomorrow night, it may be explained that Mt. Pleasant, one of the new players on the team, will preside at the piano. He is a fine musician and can handle the keys with the same ease that marks his home run hits on the diamond. Everybody away from home knows what a fine quartette the Bellefonte club has and tomorrow night Bellefonte people will learn of it. Don't forget to attend.

STANDING OF CLUBS.

The Bellefonte-Philipsburg baseball game, at Philipsburg, yesterday, was called off owing to rain. Three innings were played, at which stage of the game neither side had scored.

By losing to both Clearfield and Osceola in this week Bellefonte has dropped to third place in the Mountain League. A victory over Clearfield tomorrow will again put Bellefonte in second place. Osceola continues to hold first place by a wide margin.

THE MAD KING

Otto of Bavaria and His Ways of Existence.

Some remarkable details relating to the mad King Otto of Bavaria are published from a diplomatic source by the Giornale d'Italia, writes the Milan correspondent of the London Chronicle. Though shut up for 40 years in castles, now in the Castle Furstenried, and though 62 years of age, Otto is still a fine, handsome figure, with a magnificent beard and flowing gray locks. The stories about his periodical fits of fury are quite untrue. His court is presided over by Marshal Baron Redwiz and consists of a few trusty gentry belonging to the most ancient families of the Bavarian aristocracy. King Otto occupies the spacious and sumptuously-furnished first floor of the castle, and often passes the entire day out in the park. The walls of his apartment are hung with splendid paintings, principally of lake and mountain scenes amid which the Prince passed his happy boyhood. His medical specialist notes that these often exert a wholesome influence on his state of health, concerning which official bulletins are dispatched every month to the Prince Regent and Government, to be buried in the secret archives of the royal household.

King Otto suffers terribly from insomnia, and often sits up in bed half the night staring toward the door, as if expecting somebody to enter. He, however, rises punctually every morning at 8 and mutely allows himself to be dressed by his valet. He has a holy horror of soap and water and of having his hair and nails cut, so that servants have to await patiently a favorable day for these operations, when the poor patient is in a state of complete apathy. King Otto smokes incredible quantities of cigarettes and is always puffing away save when he is absorbed in his favorite pastime of studying the operatic music of his pet composer, Verdi. Often he causes the castle halls to resound all day long with the melodies of "Rigoletto."

The diplomat relates that the first symptom of brain decay in the young Prince, till then so bright, forceful and courageous, was manifested during the Franco-German war. Just before the siege of Paris, Kaiser William summoned him to the headquarters of the general staff and kept him under observation, in company with Bismark and Moltke, the reason being that King Otto had called out a squad of cavalry and ordered them to charge straight at a stone wall, which, he insisted, was a body of the enemy's infantry. He began preaching everywhere the stern necessity of concluding peace with France at any price. Soon after intercepted letters were brought to Emperor William which the Bavarian Prince had been dispatching secretly to the enemy. It was then that the old Kaiser sadly sent for the demented Prince, decorated him with the order of the Iron Cross for service rendered in the campaign and packed him off under a medical escort for a pleasure trip in Spain and Italy.

Huxley Knew It.

Huxley, the brilliant English scientist and man of letters, was unusually quick and subtle at repartee. Once while dining with Herbert Spencer and another friend at the Athenaeum, the conversation flagging, Spencer remarked:

"You would little think it, but I once wrote a tragedy."'

Huxley answered promptly, "I know the catastrophe."

Spencer declared it was impossible, for he had never spoken about it before then. Huxley insisted, and Spencer asked what it was. Huxley replied:

"A beautiful theory, killed by a nasty ugly little fact."—Youth's Companion.

The recent Commencement of the Lock Haven State Normal is noteworthy for several reasons; one being the fact that the school graduated the largest class in its history and the other that a very satisfactory lecture and entertainment course was completed during commencement week by a splendid presentation of Shakespeare,s "As You Like It" on the front campus by the famous Ben Greet players of England. The educational value of this performance was in itself sufficient to warrant the large outlay. It will pay you to see the beautiful catalog of this first-class school.

HER WEIGHT INCREASED FROM 100 TO 140 POUNDS.

Wonderful Praise Accorded Peruna the Household Remedy

Mrs. Maria Goertz, Orienta, Oklahoma, writes:

"My husband, children and myself have used your medicines, and we always keep them in the house in case of necessity. I was restored to health by this medicine, and Dr. Hartman's invaluable advice and books. People ask about me from different places, and are surprised that I can do all of my housework alone, and that I was cured by the doctor of chronic catarrh. My husband was cured of asthma, my daughter of earache and catarrh of the stomach, and my son of catarrh of the throat. When I was sick I weighed 100 pounds; now I weigh 140.

"I have regained my health again, and I cannot thank you enough for your advice. May God give you a long life and bless your work."

Making Ice Cream.

The labor involved in making frozen desserts is not great, says the Woman's Home Companion, and is really never thought to be great by those who make them frequently. Perhaps the crushing of the ice is the hardest thing to do in the whole operation, but with a canvas or burlap bag and a mallet this is only a short task. If one has an accommodating ice man he is often glad to do this work with his big shaver. In accepting these favors don't forget or overlook the law of reciprocity. Give him a fresh piece of pie, a doughnut or some other goody. It will be appreciated, I can assure you.

Most of us, by a slight mental effort, can travel back to school days and remember what we learned in physics relative to the chemistry of freezing; thus we know why our ice creams or ices freeze. Remember, too, that any mixture increases in bulk during this process, so the can should never be more then from two-thirds to the three-fourths full of the mixture.

Crush ice rather fine, removing any coarse pieces, and turn into a pail; then have at hand coarse salt, a small sauce pan, ice cream freezer, with mixture to be frozen. Place can containing mixture in wooden tub, cover and adjust top. Turn crank to make sure can fits in socket. Pack in ice and salt, allowing three level saucepanfuls of ice to one of salt and repeat until ice and salt come nearly to top of can, packing solidly, using handle of mallet to force it down. If only a small quantity is to be frozen, the ice and salt need only come a little higher in the tub than the mixture to be frozen. By adhering to the above-mention proportions one is insured a smooth, fine-grained cream; if a granular consistency is wanted (which is desirable only for a frappe) equal parts of ice and salt may be used.

Turn the crank slowly and steadily to expose as large a surface of the mixture as is possible to the ice and salt. After being frozen to a mush, the can may be turned more rapidly, adding more ice and salt, if needed. Never draw off the salt water until the freezing is accomplished, when it should be drawn off, the dasher removed and the mixture packed down as solidly as possible.

Put cork in opening of cover, then put on cover. Repack freezer, using four measurers of ice to one of salt, and place newspapers over the top. When serving time comes remove can, wipe carefully, then set in a pan of cold water and let stand two minutes. Remove cover, run a knife around edge of cream, invert can on chilled service dish and the frozen mixture should slip out. If there be any difficulty, a cloth wrung out of hot water passed over the can will remove it.

Ice creams are of course, a bit more attractive if molded. It is well to have a brick as well as a melon mold, and never regret that one-half as well as one-pound baking powder tins are most attractive put to this use. The salt water will not enter the cream if these simple directions are followed: When frozen mixtures are to be molded, avoid freezing too hard. Pack mixture solidly in molds and cover with buttered paper, buttered side up. Have mold filled so full that when the covers are pressed down the mixture is forced down the outsides of the molds. Repack molds in salt and ice; using four parts of ice to one part of salt.

Two mixtures molded together are doubly attractive and doubly delectable. Lining a mold is, too, a simple task. Allow the mold to be lined to stand in salt and ice until well chilled. Remove cover put in frozen mixture by spoonfuls and spread evenly, using back of tablespoon or a case knife, forming a three-fourths or even 1-inch lining where cavity may be packed with second mixture.

Holding Up Long Gloves.

Most of us prefer the fabric gloves for comfort during the warm weather, and as few long sleeves are seen at this time, the long gloves are in demand.

When the gloves have plain tops the wrinkled, mousequetaire effect above the wrist is effective and becoming, particularly to a slim arm

Many of the fabric gloves have open-work tops, decorated with the ever-popular openwork or eyelet embroidery. The effect is very good, and usually in harmony with some part of the gown, though it is not necessary that it should match any other embroidery there may be.

The fabric gloves cling to the arm more closely than kid, yet that need not prevent our wearing the very attractive armlets sold for the purpose of preventing the gloves from slipping down from the elbow.

When the sleeves do not cover the elbow it is necessary that the gloves shall. These armlets, when first introduced, were made of ribbon-covered elastic; but these have been superseded by bracelet-like affairs of jewels and beads.

One of their attractive features is that they may readily be of home manufacture.

Borax and a Hot Iron.

Summer dresses may be made to look like new if sponged twith a cloth dampened in a bowl of water in which one tablespoon of borax has been dissolved, and then pressed with a hot iron.

In this issue of "The Republican" appears the several proposed changes to the Constitution of Pennsylvania, adopted by the last Legislature. Before becoming operative the several amendments must be approved by the next Legislature and then ratified by the voters of the State at the polls, in November, 1911.

The first amendment empowers the Legislature to establish new courts, from time to time, as the same may be needed in cities or counties, to prescribe their powers, to increase the number of judges in any of the courts and also to abolish any courts where such action is deemed advisable.

The second proposed amendment is to strike out Section 4, of Article 8, of the Constitution, which reads as follows: "If twenty-two years of age and upwards, he shall have paid within two years a State or county tax, which shall have been assessed at least two months and paid at least one month before the election." This amendment abolishes the so-called poll tax system.

A consolidation of the several courts of Allegheny county is provided for in the third proposed amendment. It is proposed that the courts of Common Pleas in that county be brought into one court of Common Pleas, with a president judge.

The fourth and last proposed amendment is intended to enable the city of Philadelphia to increase its bonded debt from seven to ten percent. where the increase is used in the construction and development of subways for transit purposes, or for the construction of wharves or docks and the reclamation of lands to be used in developing the city harbor.

VALUABLE HORSES POISONED

Despicable Act of an Unknown Wretch Near Watsontown.

Two valuable horses belonging to D. C. Weik, of near Watsontown, were poisoned the early part of the week by some unknown person who ought to be in the penitentiary. On Saturday Mr. Weik purchased some feed and gave it to his horses on Saturday evening. The next morning he discovered the horses were very sick and promptly summoned a veterinary who at once declared that the animals had been poisoned and were past doing anything for. Mr. Weik was at a loss to know how they were poisoned, but thought of the new feed. He recalled that he had given some of it to the hogs and upon going to the pen found a large one dead. This was pretty conclusive evidence that the feed had been "salted" with some poisonous compound. It is to be hoped the party who committed the crime will be apprehended. A man who would do such a vicious, cowardly thing is a dangerous man in the community. Lewisburg Journal.

Tax on Whiskers.

Now that we are all crying out about our heavy taxation, I found it interesting lately to come across old documents relating to taxes of former times and reigns. Allowing for the difference in the value of money from one period to another, these ancient levies seem to have been pretty heavy and extremely varied.

Our men folk may be thankful that they have not now, as in the days of the eighth Henry, to pay a tax for the privilege of wearing a beard, a tax that was moreover a graduated one, the sliding scale being regulated according to the status of the wearer.

A certain sheriff of Canterbury, for example had to pay 3 shillings and 4 pence for his whiskers. He would not have won much sympathy from Mr. Frank Richardson. Queen Elizabeth, with even more stringent notions on this subject, fixed a similar tax on every beard of over two weeks' growth.

At a later period it was decided to place a tax on the birth of every child in England, and a sliding scale was also employed here. The baby of a duke born in the year 1695 cost its proud father 30lb, while on the infant of a commoner the tax was but 2 shillings.

Widowers and bachelors who had decided to retain the joys of single blessedness were compelled to contribute to the state, and long before the Harcourt death duties were dreamed of it was also quite a costly matter to die.

Nearer our own day the widow tax was invented by William Pitt, and in the reign of George I. it was necessary to have a license to self hats, and there was also a tax on hair powder, watches and clocks.—Lady's Pictorial.

Has Many Uses.

A quart bottle of household ammonia will cost about 10 cents; and its uses are legion.

For washing dish cloths and towels, it is invaluable.

Put a teaspoonful of the ammonia in a basin of water, rub soap on the cloths and towels, and put the towels in one pan of water and the cloths in another, and let soak for half an hour or so, where the water will keep just warm.

Then rub ont thoroughly, boil in thin suds if you wish, rinse well and dry in the outer air.

Nothing is more pleasant to use than clean, sweet-smelling and nice-looking dish cloths and towels.

The Welland Canal.

When a school boy studying geography, the writer first heard of the Welland Canal. He knew little or nothing about it, except the fact of its existance until a recent visit to Niagara Falls and Canada.

He fears the same is true of a large majority of our American Citizens. When there he made two separate visits to the Canal, in order to see it for himself, and to learn something of its design, history and mode of operation.

The surface of Lake Erie lies 326 feet above or higher than the waters of Lake Ontario. The distance between the two lakes is from twenty-five to thirty miles Nature has connected them by the Niagara river, and this descent has been overcome by the Fall of Niagara and the Rapids above and below the Falls.

This is the cause of this stupendous cataract.

The design of the Welland Canal is to afford communication for large vessels between Lake Erie and Lake Ontario. The Canal extends from Port Colborne on Lake Erie to Port Dalhousie on Lake Ontario, a distance of twenty-five miles with a decent by locks of three-hundred and twenty-six feet. Port Colborne is eighteen miles west of Buffalo.

The Canal was begun by a private corporation in 1825, aided afterwards by the Provincial Government. It was first opened May 20,1833. The first locks were 100 feet by 22 feet, made of wood and lifted 11 feet. The first water supply was from the Welland river, afterwards from the Grand river, but since 1882 it has been fed directly from Lake Erie.

The old Canal being inadequate for the passage of large vessels, it was enlarged and reconstructed from 1874 to 1882.

The portion from Port Colborne to Allansburg was widened and deepened. From Allansburg to Port Dalhousie an entirely new Canal was constructed. The entire cost of construction of both the old and new Canals up to July 1907 was $27,275,869.40. The entire expense of operating and maintaining it is provided for by the Dominion Government at Ottowa, which owns and controls the canal.

No tolls have been charged since 1902. There are twenty-six locks in all. There are twenty-five lift locks between Port Dalhousie and Thorold, a distance of eight miles, and one guard lock at Port Colborne in a distance of 17 miles.

The lift of the locks is generally twelve and fourteen feet, one lock being eighteen feet. They are operated by electricity.

The dimensions or size of the locks in the new Canal are 270 feet by 45 feet. The dimensions of the largest vessel which can pass through them are 260 long by 44 feet wide, with 14 feet draught of water, carrying 2400 tons. All locks are of the best stone masonry.

Owing to the number of locks it requires from ten to twelve hours for a vessel to pass through the Canal.

Of course, their motive power is steam. The Canal prism is generally 90 feet in width on the bottom, 160 feet on the surface with 16 feet of water. All the locks are connected by telephone with the general office at St. Catharines and with each other. St Catharines is five miles from Port Dalhousie.

Some idea of the importance of the Welland Canal may be obtained when we consider that since its completion vessels can go from Chicago, Millwaukee, Duluth, Detroit, or any other port on the Lakes, to Toronto, Montreal, Quebec and Europe.

The writer saw one of the Montreal Merchants line, which runs regulary every week between Chicago and Montreal, pass through the lock at Port Dalhousie. This line carries a limited number of passengers who may desire an outing on the lakes. Nearly all the above facts were obtained from the office of the Superintending Engineer, Mr. J. S. Weller, at St Catharines, Ontario, and may be considered authentic and reliable. I wish hereby to express my thanks to Mr. Weller and his assistants for their uniform kindness and courtesy.

Yours truly,
THOS C. VANTRIES.

Too Ambitious.

"Alfred Vanderbilt, in a white coaching coat and a white top hat, with his colors in red and white carnations in his buttonhole, drove me down to Brighton one fine June day," said a Chicagoan.

"Mr. Vanderbilt talked on the ride about horses. He is a shrewd and witty young man. Apropos of the way, in horse breeding, you must sacrifice speed to strength or strength to speed he told me a little story.

"He said we could never eat our cake and have it. We could never arrange things as the little girl in Sunday school desired.

"'Minnie,' said this little girl's teacher, 'which would you rather be beautiful or good?'"

Minnie answered, promptly:

"'I think,' she said, 'I'd rather be beautiful—and repent.' "—Washington Star.

FOURTH PARTY GOES ALONE

Prohibition Standard-Bearer Won't Retire for Berry.

Madison F. Larkin, Prohibition candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania, several days ago gave out the following statement:

As there is still a misunderstanding in the minds of some people as to whether I have consented to withdraw from the race for Governor. I desire you to publish a statement from me that will forever set a rest such doubts.

I am a Prohibitionist, and will not withdraw from the Prohibition ticket unless the party demands it. The statement that I was willing to withdraw in the interest of the cause seems to have been the stumbling block that misled some people. What I did say was that if the Prohibition and Keystone parties could get together on common ground and my party thought it for their best interests I would willingly step out for the good of the party's cause.

After reading the platform of the Keystone Party and gaining the knowledge I have of Mr. Berry I can see no reason why my party or myself should have any inclination to make any changes in the ticket nominated by the Prohibition party at its convention in Harrisburg on June 25 last.

Getting Work.

George Ade, at a National Press banquet, said of a Chicago reporter:

"He often worked with me, and I found him about as successful in getting a story as the tramp was in getting work.

"A kind lady, as she gave this tramp a large piece of cherry pie, said:

" 'But have you never made an effort to get work?'

" 'Oh, yes, ma'am' said the tramp, balancing the pie skillfully, so that none of its contents spilled. 'Oh, yes, ma'am, I got work for three members of my family last week. but none of them would take it.' "

From Sickness To "Excellent Health.

WOMEN'S WOES

Bellefonte Women Are Finding Relief at Last.

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity; they must "keep up," must attend to duties in spite of constantly aching backs, or headaches, dizzy spells, bearing-down pains; they must stoop over, when to stoop means torture. They must walk and bend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney ills. Kidneys cause more suffering than any other organ of the body. Keep the kidneys well and health is easily maintained. Read of a remedy for kidneys only that helps and cures the kidneys and is endorsed by people you know.

Mrs. John Andress, 245 S. Spring St., Bellefonte, Pa., says: "I willingly confirm the public statement I gave in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills two years ago, after they had benefited me so greatly. I procured this remedy at Green's Pharmacy Co., when suffering from backache and severe pains in my loins and its use brought prompt and lasting relief. Another member of my family also took Doan's Kidney Pills and was cured of kidney trouble."

King Edward's Kindy Wit.

King Edward's good nature was illustrated the other night by a London correspondent at the Press Club in New York.

'The king, " said the correspondent, "was visiting Rufford Abbey, and one morning, in company with his host, Lord Arthur Savile, he took a walk over the preserves.

"Suddenly Lord Arthur, a big, burly man, rushed forward and seized a shabby fellow with a dead pheasant prptruding from the breast of his coat.

" 'Sire,' said Lord Arthur to the king 'this fellow is a bad egg. This is the second time I've caught him poaching.'

"But the king's handsome face beamed, and he laughed his gay and tolerant laugh.

" 'Oh, let him go," he said, 'if he really were a bad egg, you know, he wouldn't poach.' "

"LIKE BEGETS LIKE."

Nope, "you can't squeeze blood out of a turnip," even in a hencoop.

Here, as elsewhere, from nit, nit, from fit, fit, "like begets like."

Most poultry raisers admire pretty plumage, but, oh, you pounds of fancy flesh and dandy big eggs! Yet so many forget that "like begets like." "Chuckens is jist chuckins" with them.

But can weak stock give fertile eggs and strong chicks or spindly, undersized roosters and small skinny hens beget big, plump market chickens or drone hens of nonlaying strain give pullets that smash winter egg records? Many begin with something and inbreed to nothing. Inbreeding not only reduces vitality, but cuts down the size, and the retrograde stock becomes a bunch of bone and feathers. The turkey has been inbred out of sight. The Barred Rock in many places has become only a semblance of its former self. To breed right there must be particular selection of nonclosely related stock for a purpose or dual purpose, selection to perpetuate the qualities desired, and this care must be continuous.

Many mate brother and sister. This is a step to disaster.

Cockerel and pullet matings are not always wise. Cocks and hens, cocks and pullets, cockerels and hens are best.

Note our pictures to illustrate what selection will do. The Wyandotte cock, two years old, weighs ten pounds, one and a half pounds over standard. The hen, two years old, weighs ten pounds, two and a half pounds overweight. Egg record 172 eggs per year, two pounds two ounces to dozen. They were bred from big laying stock. The chicks from this mating weigh three and a half ounces at hatching, much above the average.

WYANDOTTE HEN, TWO AND A HALF POUNDS OVER STANDARD.

The majority believe that size comes from the dam, shape from the sire, cockerel characteristics from the mother and pullet qualities from the father.

For best results breed from big, vigorous stock sprung from heavy laying ancestry on both sides.

DON'TS.

Don't let high, rank weeds form thickets where chicks may be lost or be caught by Skunk, Weasel & Co.

Don't breed from hens that lay only in the warm, cheap season unless you are merely raising meat.

Don't keep that old rooster over simply out of sentiment. If you "can't bear to eat him" the preacher will relieve your embarrassment and perhaps save you a case of indigestion.

Don't kill chickens with a hatchet that can't cut butter. The glancing blow may whack your toe.

Don't be fooled by your competitor's bluff that your show birds aren't up to snuff. You'll both know at the show.

The Crops.

Weather and crop reports show some improvement says Bradstreets. Badly needed rains have fallen in the southwest and along the north Atlanic coast, while as urgently required dry weather in the eastern half of the cotton belt has allowed of work being done in grassy fields. Corn and cotton have both been benefited, but corn in Oklahoma, Nebraska and Kansas has evidently been hurt seriously. Dry weather is still complained of in Texas. Damage ranging from 20 to 50 per cent, is noted to corn in the southwest, while in Iowa, Missouri and the states east of the Mississippi the crop has gained. Weath- conditions in the northwest have been favorable to harvesting and threshing, and spring wheat is turning out better than expected. The oats yield is a record one as to quantity, and of good quality. Winter wheat is of good quality, and yields are slightly larger than expected. Trade estimates of the government report to be issued Monday are for a corn crop of 3,000,000,000 bushels, with 540,000,000 bushels of wheat and 1,000,000,000 bushels of oats.

Dry weather east of the Mississippi has favored cotton greatly and helped to offset deterioration in Texas. The south Atlantic and gulf states, hitherto sending poor reports, are now more optimistic. Late reports are of rains in parts of Texas, which, if correct, may save the crop in that state.

Minor western crops have been helped by rains. Potatoes now promise a fair yield in Wisconsin and Michigan, and pastures have been improved east and west. Higher prices for milk and butter are a reflection of earlier unfavorable pasture conditions. Rain is still needed in the Pacific northwest. California has the largest barley crop on record.

"In the Shadow of the Chair."

A man who was tried for his life has written a powerful story of which the above is the title. Only two men living know who wrote it, so carefully has the author concealed his identity, and yet in telling of his terrible ordeal he gives a picture so vivid that one feels he has held back nothing. It is a wonderful story and you should not fail to read it in the beautiful monthly magazine which is free with The Pittsburg Dispatch Sunday, August 14. The stories in the handsome magazine are all by the best writters of the day. Some of the other good ones are: "The Beach," by Mabel Herbert Urner; "The Discoverer" by Charles Belmont Davis; "Cinderella of the Stage Door," by Grace Sartwell Mason; "Johnny M'Donald, the Two of Him," by Dave King; "The Man in Black" is the title of a strong serial, the first installment of which will be in the issue of August 14. It will be continued in the regular edition of the paper. You will like the magazine. It's free, but to be sure of getting it leave your order with the newsdealer early for The Dispatch of August 14.

Timely Suggestions.

Arrowroot will be found more satisfactory than corn starch for thickening fruit sauces or juices to be used with sauces. It does not change the liquid, nor does it cloud it at all.

When the color of a dress has faded owing to stains from lemon or other fruit juice a good idea is to touch the spots with liquid ammonia, which will often restore the color.

If your furniture has grown streaked and dull try rubbing it with flanne dipped in equal parts of turpentine and coal oil. It polishes quickly and much more cheaply than the expensive polishes.

When paring any kind of fresh fruit, if the hands are washed off immediately with cold water instead of being washed in warm water and soap there will be very little danger of unsightly stains.

Feed Dried Milk to Babies.

Extensive experiments made in England by the Leicester corporation infants milk depot show results favorable to the use of dried milk as baby food. Its advantages are said to be ease of digestion; bacterial purity, including freedom from tubercle becilli and contamination by flies, the fact that it may be kept in hot weather without souring; its cheapness, as no waste is involved; and its convenience and palatability.

Is To Be Pitied.

When William H. Berry returned from the Allentown State convention, defeated for the Democratic nomination for Governor, he had the sympathy and admiration of the people of Pennsylvania. He had entered the convention, had competed in a battle for supremacy and had met defeat. He did not stop with that. Ex Webster Grim, his successful rival, Mr. Berry had extended his hand, congratulated him on his victory and volunteered his support for the ticket.

For this demonstration of sincerity of purpose Mr. Berry won the admiration and commendation of both friend and foe. Although a defeated candidate he emerged from the convention stronger with the rank and file of his party than ever before. By the public-at-large it was felt that he should have been nominated, that he deserved it, that his party owed it to him as a reward for his service as State Treasurer.

To accept defeat in good grace is a test of courage. To gallantly clasp the hand of the victor and wish him success is the supreme test of a man's chivalry and loyalty to his party.

To all appearances Mr. Berry had stood this supreme test. Had he returned to his home and remained consistent with his course in congratulating Mr. Grim, Mr. Berry today would be the strongest Democrat in Pennsylvania, bar none.

From that high pedestal he has stepped down to one of questionable value. After entering his party convention, meeting and accepting defeat and congratulating the victor, he has alligned himself with a combination of men who have adopted the title of the "Keystone Party." He has become their candidate for Governor. To ease his conscience for having deserted his party, Mr. Berry heaps denunciation upon those in the Allentown convention who did not support him for Governor. In brief, he stamps the action of the Allentown convention as worthless.

Let us look at the other side of the matter. Mr. Berry was perfectly willing to accept a nomination at the hands of the men who constituted the Allentown convention. If the certificate of nomination accorded Mr. Grim by that convention is worthless and not binding on Democrats would it be any the less tainted and any more binding upon Democrats had Mr. Berry and not Mr. Grim been made the nominee? Mr. Berry and his campaign manager, Mr. Bonniwell, sought to have the convention reconvened. It was the same convention and they secured sufficient signatures to a call to compel the delegates to reassemble. Mr. Berry and Mr. Bonniwell were engaged in a grand bluff. When it came to a show-down they ran away. Instead of reconvening the convention they decided that they didn't want it reconvened. Mr. Berry knew that he didn't have the votes to be nominated. A nomination for himself and for no other was his sole interest in the matter.

Up to this point Mr. Berry had been working as a party man and within party lines. He now was confronted with two propositions. One was to remain with his party and be without a nomination. The other was to desert his party and secure a nomination. He chose the latter course. In a moment of weakness he decided that he was bigger than his party. He burned his bridges behind him. Blinded with selfishness he could not, or would not, see the wrecks by the wayside of those who likewise were selfish and who thought themselves bigger than any party.

The bauble which he so industriously sought is now in Mr. Berry's hands. Apparently nobody envies him in his day of glory and no doubt nights of sleepless unrest. Already we find the Philadelphia "Record" quitting him in disgust. Ex-Judge Gordon, the brains of all the "reform" movements in the last ten years, refuses to cast his fortunes in such a leaky boat. Mr. Gordon, having participated in the Allentown convention, has some regard for honor and consistency and publicly declares his intention to support the Democratic ticket. One by one those counted on to aid the "Third Party" movement are slipping away from Mr. Berry. They can see nothing ahead for him but defeat so crushing as to bury him in oblivion. In his mad scramble for an office Mr. Berry, alone, is unable to see the political grave already dug and the tombstone already erected at the end of his journey.

When he emerged from the Allentown convention Mr. Berry was an object of sympathy. Today he is an object of pity.

Thieves at Work

the residences of Dr. J. F. Alexander and Solomon Boal but devoted themselves to looking for money. Evidently being in need of a pair of trousers one of the thieves appropriated a pair belonging to Mr. Boal. About 75 cents in change happened to be in the pockets and this went with the trousers.

The Alexander residence was next visited, the thieves breaking in through a rear door. They used candles in making their way through the lower part of the house. Although they proceeded as far as the front stairway, the thieves evidently were frightened off before they had time to visit the second floor. Nothing was taken. Traces of the candles used were found on the floors.

Unsuccessful attempts were made to break into the residence of David Meyer and also the Centre Hall hotel. In both instances the thieves were frightened off.

CAPTURED BIG RATTLER

E. T. Jordan, of Colyer, Brings Three-Foot Live Snake to Bellefonte.

E. T. Jordan, of Colyer, was in Bellefonte on Friday, carrying a box with a pane or two of ordinary window glass serving as a lid. As he moved along the streets he was stopped by many persons for a glimpse into the box. What they saw made them stand and stare, for inside the box was a live three-foot rattle snake that repeatedly struck at the glass covering and accentuated his fury with a vigorous rattling of his tail. Mr. Jordan was about the only person who didn't seem to be at all afraid of the snake.

While out in the Tussey mountain on Thursday Mr. Jordan saw the rattler and noticing that it was an especially fine specimen he concluded to capture it alive. His favorite method for catching rattle snakes, he explained, is to tie a piece of woolen cloth to a stick and then dangle it before the snake's mouth. Once the snake strikes the cloth, he said, its fangs become entangled and the capture of the reptile becomes an easy matter. With the snake captured on Thursday, however, it was not such an easy task for Mr. Jordan did not happen to have a woolen cloth with him. He used a piece of cotton cloth and the rattle snake, after striking it succeeded in withdrawing its fangs. Although thoroughly angry the snake refused to again strike the cloth but tried to get near enough to Mr. Jordan to sink its fangs into his arms or legs.

Securing a pronged stick Mr. Jordan worked with the snake until he finally pinned it to the ground, the prongs of the stick being planted directly below the snake's head. It was then a simple matter, Mr. Jordan said, to pick up the snake and carry it home, where he placed it in a box. Before bringing it to Bellefonte he slipped a leather string over the snake's head as an extra precaution against its escape should he happen to open the box.

That the rattlar did not like being imprisoned in the box was illustrated when any person attempted to touch the glass covering. Repeatedly the snake would strike the glass, while a continuous rattling of its tail served warning of what would happen were the snake not a captive. The snake had eight rattles.

A BANK ACCOUNT.

A man came to us recently and ask us to lend him five hundred dollars with which to buy a pair of horses. He told us that with an additional team he could make a thousand dollars more, on a lumber contract he had.

He got the money, because we wanted to help him, and because we have found him reliable in the past. This is an illustration of the value of a bank account in a bank that always has money to lend his patrons.

"BACK TO THE FARM"

IV.—The Modern Farm Home.

By C. V. GREGORY.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

ONE of the chief reasons why the girls and women of the farm have occasionally longed in the past for the city is because of the more convenient homes that were found there. Many a farm woman has had her life shortened by carrying water from the well or the spring, bending for hours at a time over steaming washtubs and doing other hard labor from which the women in town long ago were emancipated.

Today the modern farm home is fully as well supplied with conveniences as the house in the city, and it is done at less cost. The reason that more homes are not provided with such conveniences is that the farmers have grown used to doing without them. They look forward to retiring and moving to town, where they can have all the modern conveniences. When they get there they will pay dearly for them in the form of house rent. To have them in the country means a direct cash outlay, and too often the farmer pleads that he cannot afford it. A little figuring would convince him that he need not do without a few of these conveniences that make life so much more pleasant for the whole family.

The first consideration in most parts of the country is the heating system. Farmers are getting out of the habit of using stoves, as they are finding that the added convenience of a furnace or hot water heater, together with the saving of coal or wood, will pay for the installation. With a heating system of this kind all the coal and dust incident to building and keeping up the fire are in the cellar. The whole house can be heated for about what it costs to heat two or three rooms with stoves. There is no need of crawling out of bed into a cold room in the morning. A pull on the chain will open the draft, and in half an hour or so the house is warm. The kitchen also can be heated from the cellar, and an oil stove can be used for cooking. An oil stove takes up less room, saves fuel and is much more comfortable to work over in the summer time.

A furnace has the advantage of cheapness. It also furnishes fresh air to the rooms, if properly put in. For an eight room house a furnace can be put in for about $150. A hot water system for the same house would cost a trifle more than twice as much. The hot water system has the advantages of being cleaner and keeping a more uniform heat. Cheap coal will work well in the boiler, thus considerably reducing the expense for fuel.

The next consideration is the water system. A good water supply under pressure is not only a convenience, but also a form of insurance, since each farm must furnish its own fire protection. Some farm buildings are built now of concrete and hollow tile, but even then there is always some danger of fire. An elevated tank is one of the best means of supplying pressure. Some of the modern types of silos are being built with a tank on top. A method that is as convenient, though a little more expensive, is a pneumatic tank in the cellar. The water is pumped into this and the air inside compressed. The air pressure will lift the water to all parts of the house.

For power to pump the water a windmill may be used, or a hydraulic ram if running water is obtainable. The most reliable power is a gasoline engine. Nearly every really up to date modern farm has its gasoline engine, which can easily be made to combine pumping with its other duties. With a little added expense the water system can be made double, so that both hard and soft water can be obtained. For the bathroom and the kitchen sink hot water is needed also, which can be provided by a heater in the range or by a separate oil heater.

With a good water system installed the work of the housewife is reduced 50 per cent. Cold and hot water, either hard or soft, is always at hand for use in the kitchen. The dishes can be piled into the sink and washed in almost half the time it took previously. A wash room with permanent tubs can be provided in the cellar. The washing machine can be run with the gasoline engine or with a water motor. While a room of this kind may not make washing exactly a pleasure, it will reduce the labor more than half. With a little planning a small tank can be arranged in the kitchen, so that all the water that is pumped for the stock will pass through it. This is almost as good as an icebox.

A good bath and toilet room is a great convenience to all the family. A shower bath in one corner of the barn will be greatly appreciated by the boys at the close of a hot day's work.

The wastes from the kitchen sink and from the wash room can be run into a tile and taken away. For the wastes from the toilet room a sewage disposal plant will have to be provided. The most convenient method is the septic tank. This is an underground cement lined brick tank divided into two compartments. As one compartment fills it overflows into the next. Nearly all the solid substance will be destroyed by bacteria, and the water that flows out at the lower end can be disposed of through a tile drain. The entire cost of a water system such as the one described, with the compressed air tank, together with the sewage disposal plant, need not be much more than $250.

The cheapest method of lighting the farmhouse is by acetylene gas. This gas is generated by a machine in the cellar and can be piped to all the rooms and to the barn. If desired it can be used also for cooking. The average cost of installing an acetylene plant is about $200. This includes lights in the barn and in the yard. It costs little to run an acetylene plant after it is once in. The average cost is about a cent for a sixteen candle power light for four hours. Acetylene is the nearest like daylight of any kind of artificial light and is incomparably better than the old fashioned oil lamp. The newer types of acetylene lamp are provided with a battery, so that they can be lighted by merely turning a button.

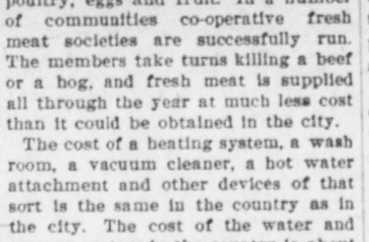
By going to a little more expense electric light can be had on the farm. If a gasoline engine is already at hand the total cost of installing an electric plant, with lights in house and barn, need not be more than $375.

A few electric fans will make the house comfortable in hot weather. One convenience of the city, ice, is still lacking. The way the ice problem is most satisfactorily handled in the country is for half a dozen neighbors to build a co-operative icehouse. The men club together and fill it in the winter, and a plentiful supply of ice is at hand all through the summer. With a small additional expense a cold storage room can be built in connection with the icehouse for keeping meat, poultry, eggs and fruit. In a number of communities co-operative fresh meat societies are successfully run. The members take turns killing a beef or a hog, and fresh meat is supplied all through the year at much less cost than it could be obtained in the city.

The cost of a heating system, a wash room, a vacuum cleaner, a hot water attachment and other devices of that sort is the same in the country as in the city. The cost of the water and sewage system in the country is about $250. The cost of operating a water system in the country is much less than the cost of city water.

An electric lighting system for the farm will cost from $375 up. The life of such a system can be figured safely at twenty years. The storage batteries will not last so long, but the rest of the apparatus will last longer. This would mean an annual depreciation of $18.75. Interest at 6 per cent would amount to $22.50. The cost of operating the plant will depend, of course, on the amount of electricity used. The cost for lighting the average farmhouse and barn for a year and furnishing electricity for sundry other purposes will not average more than $10 for gasoline. This makes the total cost for electricity $41.25 a year. In the city the average cost for electricity for an eight room house is about $50 a year.

The cost of an icehouse and of putting up ice varies so much with conditions that it is hard to give any general figures. These can easily be obtained for any particular locality, however. It is seldom that ice put up in this manner costs as much in the country as in town.



CROSS SECTION OF A SEPTIC TANK.

The farm home can be fitted with hot water heat, hot and cold water, bath and toilet room, electric lights, wash room in the cellar, etc., for $1,000. The interest on $1,000 is $60 a year. Ten per cent for depreciation and repairs is $100 a year. The saving in coal will pay for the cost of running the lighting and water systems. For $160 a year the farm home can be provided with every modern convenience that the city home possesses.

By using a furnace and an acetylene system the annual cost can be lowered to about $85. The city man pays that extra $7 to $14 a month and more in increased rent and thinks nothing of it. The farmer is beginning to realize that it is possible for him to live better, and he is rapidly taking advantage of the opportunity.

PEARL DIVERS OF JAPAN

Women and Young Girls Who Are Expert Swimmers.

The pearl divers of Japan are the women. Along the coast of the Bay of Ago and the Bay of Gokasho the 13 and 14-year-old girls, after they have finished their primary school work, go to sea and learn to dive. They are in the water and learn to swim almost from babyhood, and they spend most of their time in the water except in the coldest season, from the end of December to the beginning of February.

Even during the most inclement of seasons they sometimes dive for pearls. They wear a special dress, white underwear and the hair twisted up into a hard knot. The eyes are protected by glasses to prevent the entrance of water. Tubs are suspended from the waist.

A boat in command of a man is assigned to every five to ten women divers to carry them to and from the fishing grounds. When the divers arrive on the grounds they leap into the water at once and begin to gather oysters at the bottom. The oysters are dropped into the tubs suspended from their waists.

When these vessels are filled the divers are raised to the surface and jump into the boats. They dive to a depth of from five to thirty fathoms without any special apparatus and retain their breath while remaining under water from one to three minutes. Their ages vary from 13 to 40 years, and between 25 and 35 they are at their prime.—New York Sun.

Early Start on X-mas Gifts.

There are many girls who are taking the quiet days of midsummer to fashion dainty little gifts for Christmas presents to their girl friends.

Bags seem to be a favorite pickup work with many of these girlish porch seamstresses.

In the cretonne bag family are laundry bags of cretonne to match the hangings and cushions; in one's friends rooms also a shoe bag which may be fastened with gilt-headed tacks to the inside of the closet door.

Paper and string bags are especially useful, and should be made of cretonne with seams neatly bound with colored tape. These bags are large and deep, so that big sheets of wrapping paper, folded in four, will easily fit inside. There are two sections to the paper and string bag—a back and a front, and these are cut at the top into a sharp point.

A brass ring is attached to each point and the bag is hung on a nail from these rings. When a bit of wrapping paper is to be thrust inside, the front of the bag with its ring is slipped off the hook and readjusted after the insertion of the wrapping paper. On the front section of the bag is stitched a square pocket for the bits of twine which are removed from packages and rolled over the finger into a compact wad.

In making shoe and slipper bags of cretonne care should be taken to have the pockets large enough for the easy insertion of the footwear.

It is most annoying to find the pockets in the shoe bag, evidently designed by a neat friend for one's use, so small that two hands are necessary to fit each shoe within.

An attractive opera and evening bag is of tabular form and gathered at the bottom. It looks much like a huge acorn.

It may be of vivid green satin covered with netting of dull bronze green gold with tassel on point to match.

The netting is unusual, as it is crocheted in diamond-shaped divisions from narrow gold braid. Any one who crochets could easily pick out a stitch to answer, or a similar effect could be had by using the braid in a large needle and making a honeycomb stitch over the finished bag.

This is done by making a row of loose buttonhole stitches around the top of the bag. They should be evenly spaced. The second row is taken through the centre of each stitch in the upper row, and so on until the bag is covered.

With this form of bag it may be necessary to increase the number of honeycombs by putting two stitches in one space or skipping a space for narrowing.

The top of the bag is faced and has a draw string of narrow green ribbon, while there is also a handle of plaited gold braid to match the netting braid.—Phila. Evening Times.

At a banquet in New York, Canon Henson, according to the Washington Star, describing the old dress of English bishops, said:

"The bishop of Bath and Wells had been visiting Scarborough. On the way to the train he lost his reckoning and stopped a boy.

"'I say, my lad, how far is it to the station?' he asked.

"About a mile straight ahead," said the boy. Then, staring at the bishop's knee breeches and silk stockings, he added:

"What's up? Somebody swipe your bike?"

Speaking With Authority.

One of the briefest and no doubt one of the most sincere addresses ever delivered on the subject of capital punishment was made in Worcester County, Mass., more than two generations ago.

A notorious character by the name of Charley James, standing on the gallows with the noose properly adjusted, was asked before the cap was drawn over his face if he would like to say a few words.

"Ladies and gentlemen—beg pardon, gentlemen," he said. "Standing where I do, I am unalterably opposed to capital punishment." Everybody's Magazine.

Canning Peaches.

Marie Parloa's directions for canning peaches are both simple and scientific. Here they are:

"Decide upon the amount of fruit you will cook at one time, then have two bowls—one for the sugar and one for the fruit—that will hold just the quantity of each. As the fruit is pared, drop it into its measuring bowl. When the measure is full put the fruit and sugar in the preserving kettle. While this is cooking another measure may be prepared and put in the second preserving kettle. In this way the fruit is cooked quickly and put in the jars and sealed at once, leaving the pans ready to sterilize another set of jars."

Another delicious but more elaborate method is a favorite with those who have time to do the work. Allow to every eight quarts of fruit two pounds of sugar and three quarts water. Make a syrup, stirring until the sugar is dissolved. As soon as it boils skim carefully. Meanwhile, peel the peaches, pack in the sterilized glass jars, making sure that your rubbers are new and the tops of the cans perfect. Settle the fruit as you pack by shaking the jar. Fill the hot jars with boiling syrup. Adjust the glass top half way over the jar, but do not put on the rubber. Set the jars in the oven in shallow pans half filled with boiling water. Close the oven door (the oven should be only moderately warm) and cook the fruit 15 minutes. Take from oven, having adjusted the rubbers fill each jar in turn with the boiling syrup, which should have been kept hot on the back of the stove. Fill so full that the scalding liquid runs over, then put on the top, wipe and seal. Set the cans on a board or thickly folded paper out of a draft until cooled, when they can probably tighten the top still more. This syrup does not make the fruit sweet. If you prefer to have it sweeter increase the proportion of sugar. Peaches put up this way in cans look better than when cooked in a kettle, then dipped into the can. When the peaches are large they must be cut in halves, but leave in the pits for flavor.

CHAPTER IV.

AT THE BLACK EAGLE.

HANS GRUMBACH was standing on the curb in front of the Grand hotel, his back to the sun. It was 9 o'clock. Hans was short, but strongly built—a mild, blue eyed German, smooth faced, ruddy cheeked, white haired, with a brown button of a nose.

Presently two police officers came along and went into the hotel. Grumbach turned with a sigh and followed them. Doubtless they had come to look over his passports. And this happened to be the case.

The senior officer unfolded the precious document.

"It is not yet vised by your consul," said the officer.

"I arrived late last night. I shall see him this morning," replied Grumbach.

"You were not born in America?"

"Oh, no; I came from Bavaria when twenty."

"Did you go to America with your parents?"

"No; I was alone."

"What is your business in America?"

"I am a plumber, now retired."

"You are forty?" said the officer, referring to the passports.

"Yes."

"As soon as these are approved by his excellency the American consul kindly have a porter bring them over to the bureau of police. It will be only a matter of form. I shall return them at once."

Grumbach produced a Louis Napoleon, which was then, as now, acceptable that side of the Rhine.

"Drink a bottle, you and your comrade," he said.

This the officer promised to do forthwith and, followed by his assistant, walked off briskly.

Grumbach took off his derby and wiped the perspiration from his forehead.

Coming up the thoroughfare with a dash of spirit and color was a small troop of horses. Grumbach watched them till they disappeared into the palace courtyard. He called to the waiter.

"Who are they?"

"The grand duke and some of his staff, herr."

"The grand duke? Who was the gentleman in civilian clothes?"

"That was his excellency Herr Carmichael, the American consul."

"Very good. And the young lady?"

"Her serene highness the Princess Hildegarde."

"Bring me a glass of beer," said Grumbach, sinking down at a table.

"HER SERENE HIGHNESS THE PRINCESS HILDEGARDE."

When the waiter returned he said, "Where does Herr Carmichael live?"

"The consulate is in the Adlergasse. He himself lives here at the Grand hotel."

So Herr Carmichael lived here. That would be convenient. Grumbach decided to wait for him. The American consul later came along with energetic stride. Grumbach rose and caught Carmichael by the arm.

"Your pardon, sir, but you are Mr. Carmichael, the American consul?"

"I am."

"Will you kindly look over my papers?" Grumbach asked.

"You are from the United States?" Then Carmichael remembered that this must be the compatriot who arrived the night before. "I shall be very glad to see you in the Adlergasse at half after 10. Any one will show you the way. I cannot transact my business in these dusty clothes. Good morning."

Grumbach liked the consul's smile. More than that, he recognized instantly that this handsome young man was a gentleman.

He had more than an hour to idle away, so he wandered through the park, admiring the freshness of the green, the well kept flower beds, the crisp hedges and the clean graveled paths. Nothing had changed in Dreiberg save the Konigstrasse, whose cobbles had been replaced by smooth blocks of wood. At times he sent swift but uncertain glances toward the palaces. He longed to peer through the great iron fence, but he smothered this desire. He would find out what he wanted to know when he met Carmichael at the consulate. Here the bell in the cathedral struck the tenth hour. Not a semitone had this voice of bronze changed in all these years. It was good to be here in Dreiberg again.

He had put out his first protest against the world in the Adlergasse forty years since. He came to a stand before the old tavern. Not even the sign had been painted anew. He noted the dingy consulate sign, then started up the dark and narrow stairs. The consulate door stood open. A clerk, native to Ehrenstein, was writing at a table. At a desk by the window sat Carmichael deep in a volume of Dumas.

"Mr. Carmichael?" said Grumbach in English.

The clerk indicated with his pen toward the individual by the window. Carmichael read on. Grumbach went boldly over and seated himself in the chair at the side of the desk.

"I am Mr. Grumbach. I spoke to you this morning about my passports. Will you kindly look them over?"

Carmichael took the papers, frowning slightly. The consul went over the papers.

"You will have no trouble going about with those," Carmichael said listlessly. "Is there anything I can do for you?"

"There is only one thing," answered Grumbach. "It will be a great favor."

"What do you wish?"

"An invitation to the military ball at the palace after the maneuvers," quietly.

Carmichael sat up.

"I am afraid you are asking something impossible for me to obtain," coldly.

"Ah, Mr. Carmichael, it is very important that I should be there. I can give you no explanations. I wish to attend this ball. I do not care to meet the grand duke or any one else. Put me in the gallery where I shall not be noticed."

"That might be done. But you have roused my curiosity. You have some purpose?"

"A perfectly harmless one," said Grumbach, mopping his forehead.

This movement brought Carmichael's eye to a scar on the back of his visitor's head. Grumbach acknowledged the stare by running his finger along the subject.

"I came near passing in my checks the day I got that," he volunteered. "Everybody looks at it when I take off my hat. I've tried tonics, but the hair won't grow there."

"Where did you get it?"

"At Gettysburg."

Carmichael was no longer indifferent. He gave his hand.

"I've got a few scars myself. What regiment?"

"The —th cavalry, New York."

"What troop?" with growing excitement.

"C troop."

"I was captain of B troop in the same regiment. Hurrah! Work's over for the day. Come along with me, Grumbach, and we'll talk it over downstairs in the Black Eagle. You're a godsend. C troop! Hanged if the world doesn't move things about oddly. I was in the hospital myself after Gettysburg—a ball in the leg. And I've rheumatism even now when a damp spell comes."

So down to the tavern they went, and there they talked the battles over, sundry tankards interpolating. It was "Do you remember this?" and "Do you recall that?" with diagrams drawn in beer on the oaken table.

"But there's one thing, my boy," said Carmichael, "the odds were on our side or we'd be fighting yet."

"That we would."

"But you're from this side of the water?"

"Yes; went over when I was twenty-two. I'm from Bavaria."

Grumbach circled the room. All the near tables were vacant. The Black Eagle was generally a lonely place till late in the afternoon. Grumbach touched the scar tenderly. Could he trust this man? Could he trust any one in the world? The impulse came to trust Carmichael, and he did not disregard it.

"I was born in this very street," he whispered.

"Here?"

"Sh! Not so loud. Yes, in this very street. But if the police knew I wouldn't be worth that!" with a snap of the fingers.

"But what does this all mean? Can I help you in any way?"

"No; no one can help me."

"But why come back?"

"Who can say what a man will do? Don't question me. Let be. I have said too much already."

"But your name?"

Grumbach laughed unmusically. "Grumbach is as good as another. Listen. When I left Dreiberg there was a reward of a thousand crowns for me dead or alive."

Carmichael was plainly bewildered.

"You were mad to return."

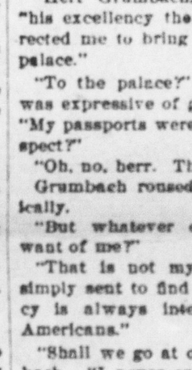
"I know it. I couldn't help it. Oh, don't look like that! I never hurt anybody unless it was in battle"—naively. "Now, what has happened since I went away? I have dared to ask questions of no one?"

Carmichael, strangely attracted and trustful of his questioner, gave him a brief summary of events, principal among which was the amazing restoration of the Princess Hildegarde. To describe the Princess Hildegarde was not only an easy task but a pleasant one to Carmichael.

"So she is gentle and beautiful? Why not? Ach! You should have seen her mother. She was the most beautiful woman in all Germany, and she sang like one of those Italian nightingales. The king of Jugendheit wanted her, but she loved the grand duke. So the Princess Hildegarde has come back to her own? God is good!"

"Well," said Carmichael, beckoning to the waitress and paying the score, "if any trouble arises send for me. You don't look like a man who has done anything very bad." He offered his hand again. Grumbach pressed it firmly, and there was a moisture in his eyes.

Grumbach declined Carmichael's invitation to lunch and immediately sought his own room. Once there he closed the shutters and opened his battered trunk. From the false bottom he took out a small bundle. Mad fool that he had been! How many times had he gazed at these trinkets in these sixteen or more years! How many times had the talons of remorse gashed his heart!



MAD FOOL THAT HE HAD BEEN!

Two little yellow shoes, like two butterflies; a little cloak trimmed with ermine, a golden locket shaped like a heart!

* * * * * * *

Grumbach was very fond of music. There was nothing at the opera, so he decided to spend the earlier part of the evening in the public gardens.

Subsequently he found himself standing beside a young vintner and his peasant sweetheart. Their hands secretly met and locked behind their backs. Grumbach sighed. He would always go his way alone.

The girl turned her head. She loosened the vintner's hand.

"Do not mind me, girl," said Grumbach, his face broadening.

The girl laughed easily and without confusion. Her companion, however, flushed under his tan, and a scowl ran over his forehead.

The band was playing "Les Huguenots," and the girl hummed the air.

A hand was put upon Grumbach's shoulder authoritatively. The police officer who had examined his passports that morning stood at Grumbach's elbow.

"Herr Grumbach," he said quietly, "his excellency the chancellor has directed me to bring you at once to the palace."

"To the palace?" Grumbach's face was expressive of great astonishment. "My passports were wrong in some respect?"

"Oh, no, herr. They were correct."

Grumbach roused his mind energetically.

"But whatever can the chancellor want of me?"

"That is not my business. I was simply sent to find you. His excellency is always interested in German Americans."

"Shall we go at once?" asked Grumbach. "I never expected to enter the palace of the Grand Duke of Ehrenstein." Grumbach added. "It will be something to tell of when I go back to America."

"The palace is lighted up," was Grumbach's comment as the two passed the sentry outside the gates.

"The duke gives the dinner to the diplomatic corps tonight."

"A fine thing to be a diplomat."

"I myself prefer fighting in the open. Diplomats? Their very precious hides are never anywhere near the wars they bring about. No, no—this way. We go in at the side."

"You'll have to guide me. Yes, these diplomats. Men like you and me do all the work. I was in the civil war in America."

"That was a great fight," remarked the officer. "I should like to have been there."

"Four years—pretty long. Do you know Herr Carmichael?"

"The American consul? Oh, yes."

"He and I fought in the same regiment."

"Then you saw some pretty battles."

Grumbach took off his hat. "See that?"

"Gott! That must have been an ugly one."

The somber black of Carmichael's evening dress stood out conspicuously among the blue and green and red uniforms at the grand duke's dinner. Etiquette compelled him to wear silk stockings, but that was the single concession on his part. He wore no orders.

The duke sat at the head of the table and her serene highness at the foot. And it was by the force of his brilliant wit that the princess did not hold in perpetuity the court at her end of the table. For a German princess of that time she was highly accomplished. She was ardent, whimsical, with a flashing mentality which rounded out and perfected her physical loveliness. Above and beyond all this she had suffered; she had felt the pangs of poverty, the smart of unrecognized merit. She had been one of the people, and her sympathies would always be with them, for she knew what those about her only vaguely knew, the patience, the unmurmuring bravery, of the poor.

"Gentlemen," said the duke, rising and holding up his glass, "this night I give you a toast which I believe will be agreeable to all of you, especially to his excellency Baron von Steinbock of Jugendheit. What is past is past. A new regime begins this night." He paused. All eyes were focused upon him in wonder. Only Baron von Steinbock displayed no more than ordinary interest. "I give you," resumed the duke, "her serene highness and his majesty Frederick of Jugendheit!"

The princess grew delicately pale as the men and women sprang to their feet. Every hand swept toward her, holding a glass. She had surrendered that morning—not because she wished to be a queen, not because she cared to bring about an alliance between the two countries. No; it was because she was afraid and had burned the bridge behind her.

The tan thinned on Carmichael's face, but his hand was steady. She sat still in her chair, her lids drooped, but a proud lift to her chin. Beautiful to him beyond all dreams of beauty! God send another war and let him die in the heart of it, fighting!

In the ballroom the princess was surrounded. Everybody flattered her, congratulated her and complimented her.

Carmichael was among the last to approach her. By this time he had his voice and nerves under control.

"I thought you had forgotten me," she said. They walked to the conservatory.

"Forget your highness?" He bowed over her hand and brushed it with his lips, for she was almost royal now. "Your highness will be happy. It is written. You will be a great queen."

"Who knows?" dreamily. "When I recall what I have gone through all this seems like an enchantment out of a fairy book and that I must soon wake up in my garden in Dresden."

If only it might be an enchantment, he thought—if only he might find her, as the grim old chancellor had found her, in a garret! What? Dreaming again. He shrugged.

"Why did you do that?" she asked quickly.

"It was a momentary dream I had, and the thought of its utter impossibility caused me to shrug."

"This dream—was there not a woman in it?"

"Oh, no; there was only an angel."

"You interest me; you always interest me. You have seen so many wonderful things. And now it is angels."

"Only one, your highness." This was daring. "But perhaps I am putting my foot where angels fear to tread," which was still more daring.

"Angels ought not to be afraid of anything." She laughed. There was a pain and a joy in the sound of it. She read his heart as one might read a written line.

"Dreams are always unfinished things," he said, getting back on safer ground.

"What is she like, this angel?" forcing him upon dangerous ground again willfully.

"I dare not tell you." His eyes sought hers unflinchingly. The chancellor and Baron von Steinbock came up.

"Your highness," began the benign voice of the chancellor, "the baron desires, in the name of his august master, to open the ball with you. Behold my fairy wand," gayly. "This night I have made you a queen."

"Can you make me happy also?" said she so low that only the chancellor heard her.

"I shall try. Ah, Herr Captain," with a friendly jerk of his head toward Carmichael, "will you do me the honor to join me in my cabinet a quarter of an hour hence?"

"I shall be there, your excellency." Carmichael was uneasy. He was not certain how much the chancellor had heard.

CHAPTER V.

THE KING'S LETTER.

CARMICHAEL at once sought the chancellor's cabinet. To his surprise the room was already tenanted. Grumbach and a police officer!

"What's the trouble?" Carmichael inquired.

"Your excellency knows as much as I do," said the officer.

Occasionally Grumbach wiped his forehead. Then the chancellor came in. He bowed cordially and drew chairs about his desk. He placed Grumbach in the full glare of the lamp.

"Herr Grumbach," said the chancellor in a mild tone, "I should like to see your papers."

Grumbach laid them on the desk imperturbably. The chancellor struck the bell. His valet answered immediately.

"Send Breunner, the head gardener, at once."

The chancellor shot a piercing glance at Grumbach.

Breunner entered. He was thin and partly bald.

"Breunner, her highness will need many flowers tomorrow. See to it that they are cut in the morning."

"It shall be done, excellency."

The chancellor turned to the passports.

"There is only one question, Herr Grumbach. It says here that you were a native of Bavaria before going to America. How long ago did you leave Bavaria?"

"A good many years, your excellency."

"You have, of course, retained your Bavarian passport?"

Grumbach brought forth a bulky wallet.

"Here it is, your excellency."

The chancellor went over it carefully.

"Herr Captain, do you know this compatriot?"

"We fought side by side in the American war. I saw no irregularity in his papers."

"Then he is no stranger to you?"

"I do not say that. We were, however, in the same cavalry, only in different troops. Grumbach, you have your honorable discharge with you?"

Sleep

Sleep is nature's rebuilding period, when the energy used by the brain, muscles and organs is renewed. If you lose sleep, your system is robbed of the strength sleep should give. Continued loss of sleep multiplies this loss until you become a physical wreck. Dr. Miles' Nervine quiets the irritated nerves and brings refreshing, invigorating sleep. Nervine contains no opiates, and therefor leaves no bad after-effects.

"For over two years I suffered untold agonies; my friends thought I was going crazy. I could not sleep nor rest at all. I tried different doctors, but failed to find relief. My head would ache all the time; I was like one drunk; could not concentrate my mind, and was so restless and worried that sleep was out of the question. After taking one bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine I felt wonderfully changed. I am now on my third bottle and am gaining all the time. I can lie down and sleep like a child, and am able to do my work." Stalk Borers on Tomato Vines.

A Justice of the Peace of Juniata, Pa., forwarded to State Zoologist H. A. Surface, Harrisburg, a tomato stalk which he said had been attacked by a pest that is new in his section, and is causing much damage.

Professor Surface gave the following information which will be found useful to all who are growing tomatoes:

"The insect which you sent to us in the stalk of tomato is known as the Stalk borer. This bores through the plant, and, as you say, soon destroys it. I have many reports of this pest each year boring in the stalks of tomatoes and various other plants, as well as sometimes corn.

"This larva, or worm, goes into the ground and spends the winter as a chrysalis or pupa, then transforms into a winged moth in the spring and lays eggs on the stalks of plants, and the next generation of boring larvae then develops. There is really no remedy for it after it once enters the stalk of the plant. The best thing to do is to cut off and burn the infested part, so as to get rid of the pest and prevent its increase in numbers.

"As this borer lives mostly in the stalks of large weeds, it is very important that the large weeds be mowed during the early part of each of the months of July, August and September, so as to destroy these borers before they come to maturity. This together with the pulling and burning of infested plants, and the burning of vines of tomatoes and potatoes, as soon as the crop is gathered, will do as much as anything toward helping you to keep it in subjection, and in preventing much more serious damage from it another year.

"This is one of the destructive pests of potatoes, having recently increased considerably in this State, but if the stems of potatoes and tomatoes are sprayed well with either Paris green or arsenate of lead, this should kill the larvae before they enter the stalk and just after they hatch from the egg, on exactly the same principle as the Codling moth is killed by the arsenical poisons on the apple by bitting it when starting to eat its way through the uit."

Room in Farm Lands.

The land transfers for the month of March in this county amounted to $1,-119,000, all being sales of farms and with lots and small tracts excluded. This is a greater sum then many entire years have shown, and indicates how great has been the change of ownership in Western farms recently, an Abilene (Kan.) letter to the New York Evening Post says. The sales were practically all of farmers moving in from states farther east, and as a whole they brought with them a considerable part of the purchasing price. The farmers selling out moved farther west and bought cheaper land or moved to town to take a rest. The sales were in almost every instance at figures above $50 an acre, some as high as $125 an acre.

The high prices of farm products have encouraged extensive buying, and the changes in farms have been constantly at an increasing value during the last five years. Never, however, has there been such a great number of land sales made as in the last six months. The real estate men say the prospects are for another year of as numerous sales and that the total valuations will doubtless be asflarge.

With a continuance of high prices for products, as now seems probable, there is a constant temptation for the land buyers to pay higher prices, and the probabilities of a greater land movement during next fall and winter are considered good by those interested. A lessened crop return would doubtless have a quieting effect, and with present wheat prospects in Central Kansas this may be the result.

Sad Fatality at Munson.

On Wednesday of last week a couple of miners on their way to work were shocked to find the dead body of an elderly woman lying on the street in front of the Moshannon House, at Munson, says the Philipsburg Journal. Investigation revealed the body to be that of Mrs Mary Haley, mother of John Haley, proprietor of the Moshannon House, with whom she made her home.

Some mystery attaches to her death, but the supposition is she had gotten up in her sleep during the night, went out through the window to the roof of the front porch and fell to the ground, a distance of 35 feet, receiving such injuries as to probably cause immediate death.

The deceased, who was aged 69 years, was a native of Ireland, but came to this country in her early years. Her husband who has been dead for some years, was Martin Haley, of Karthaus, to whom twelve children were born, ten of whom survive, viz: Thomas residing in Ohio: James, of Patton; Joseph, of Strattonville, Pa.; Mrs. Margaret McCabe, of Wilkes-Barre; Mrs. Catherine Laughton and Mrs. Mame Sickle, of Snow Shoe; Miss Annie, a stenographer in Pittsburg; Mrs. Lena Reese, of Karthaus; John, of Munson, and Miss Agnes, who makes her home with the latter. One brother and one sister, residing at Joliet, Ill., also survive.

On Thursday, last, Charles VanGordon, a young man who was working on the farm of Harvey Geiser, near Hublersburg, fell from a hay mow, a distance of about 17 feet, sustaining injuries which necessitated his removal to the Bellefonte hospital. While unloading hay he stepped backward into a hay hole and fell on his head onto the floor below. For a time he was unconscious and it was feared that he would not live. On Monday he began to improve and it now is believed that he will recover.

Rev. John Hewitt, rector of the Episcopal church, Bellofonte, was in town on Monday, renewing good fellowship with old-time friends. This splendid preacher was rector of St. John's church, this place, from 1868 to 1870, and during his pastorate was in charge of the Huntingdon Academy, where a number of our leading business men were schooled and had their ears boxed. These fellows greeted their old schoolmaster most heartily. Dr. Hewitt has snowy locks, but his heart is young, and his disposition as amiable as that of an ardent young lover. Come again, Doctor. Huntingdon Globe.

The Lock Haven State Normal School is easily accessible from every part of Pennsylvania either by means of the Pennsylvania Railroad or the New York Central. It is located in a thriving town of ten thousand people on the west branch of the Susquehanna and in a locality that is famous throughout the state on account of its scenic beauty. The buildings are modern, comfortable and convenient. It has a faculty of College and University trained men and women. Its professional work is peculiarly well adapted for the training of teachers for the public schools. If you are interested in a good school, address the Principal for an illustrated catalog.

Mrs. George Robb has returned home after a very delightful visit with relatives in Ohio. Before returning she enjoyed an excursion to the lakes. There isn't any place in the world like Bellefonte in the estimation of George, so one may imagine the look on his face when Mrs. Robb returned home, not only enthusiastic over Ohio but expressing a desire to sell her property here and locate in that State. Taking a philosophical view of the matter, George says that it is for her to decide and that if she concludes to move to Ohio he supposes it will be Ohio for him, too.

The Bellefonte band last night gave a fine concert in front of the Hotel Haag. Tomorrow afternoon the band will turn out and help in the boosting by parading from the Diamond to the baseball grounds. Both the Bellefonte and Clearfield teams will be in the parade, which will leave the Diamond about 2.30 o'clock. The men in the band are turning out without any charge for their services, which is the proper spirit. This is also the spirit which should be appreciated by the public and when the members of the band happen along, seeking a little boosting to help them buy new uniforms, don't give them the "glad hand and the marble heart."

Evan Bowers, bookkeeper for the Bellefonte Lumber Company, is critically ill and fears are entertained for his recovery. On Wednesday evening, of last week, he made a call at the home of William Whitmeyer and was taken ill while there. His condition rapidly became worse and it was deemed unwise to remove him. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bowers, of Aaronsburg, arrived in town immediately on learning of his condition and ever since have remained at his bedside. The many friends of the young man sincerely trust that he may take a turn for the better and be restored to health.

One day last week we received a letter from John Dillen, of Nittany, who is employed on the Huyett-McNit lumber job, at Waddle, advising us to be in the office along about 6 o'clock on Saturday evening. Something turned up to cause us to miss him. Desiring to pay his subscription to "The Republican" and also take the early train for Nittany, Mr. Dillen solved the problem by handing the money to Henry Kline, proprietor of the Hotel Haag, who promptly delivered it to us the following day. Mr. Dillen is one of our regular readers and we want him to know that the next time he writes us to remain on deck until he shows up we will do so, even though the Bellefonte Central train from Waddle is several hours late.

The Chinese Empire accomplishes about one-fourth of its possibilities. True to its poppy-dream traditions, it resents western innovations. They follow in the foot steps of their honorable grandfathers, and they miss life's opportunities in the blind adherence to a mistaken and hide-bound policy. A few of them follow the glow of the seting sun and find wealth and plenty. Must you, like the Chinaman, do exactly what your father and your grandfather did before you? Or is it possible for us to direct your attention to some modern business innovations? May be you think you do not need any more life insurance. This is because you have not had the western idea of life insurance explained to you. Life insurance history in the west--the land of opportunities--has been made during your generation. You will fall short of accomplishing the best results in your life insurance investments if you shun facts in order to adhere to traditions. You can, if you will, participate in the prosperity of the west; in their eight per cent. mortgage investmeuts; in their National Bank-note form of security; and you can have the satisfaction of being shown what has actually been done, as well as what is expected to be done. Mr. Swell Dresser:

Shirts, Ties, Collars, everything your body needs, is flying out of our store, because we are keeping on selling togs for men at low prices.

If you can buy three shirts or neckties for the price of two, why not get that extra shirt and necktie?

It is easy to put a string of prices on paper, but we won't bore you with these.

Nor will we bore you when you come into our store. Our clerks are asked not to bore those who pay us a call. We will save you money. Ask our customers if we tell the truth?
